

John Wesley's Rule

Do all the good you can,
By all the means you can,
In all the ways you can,
In all the places you can,
At all the times you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can.

—attributed to John Wesley

Note: Although we traditionally attribute this saying to John Wesley, there is no evidence that Wesley ever actually said it. Still, Wesley's Rule has been a popular saying among United Methodists for decades and serves as a great summary of how to live our lives in response to Wesley's second General Rule, "Do good."

John Wesley's Rule

Do all the good you can,
By all the means you can,
In all the ways you can,
In all the places you can,
At all the times you can,
To all the people you can,
As long as ever you can.

—attributed to John Wesley

Note: Although we traditionally attribute this saying to John Wesley, there is no evidence that Wesley ever actually said it. Still, Wesley's Rule has been a popular saying among United Methodists for decades and serves as a great summary of how to live our lives in response to Wesley's second General Rule, "Do good."

